Culinary Farms to Fully Integrate into BCFoods Brand in April 2025

Santa Rosa, CA – February 2025 – BCFoods, a global leader in dehydrated ingredients, is excited to announce the upcoming full integration of its subsidiary, Culinary Farms, into the BCFoods brand. Effective Q2 2025, all Culinary Farms products will officially transition to being sold under the BCFoods name, uniting the two companies under one brand, and offering customers a seamless experience and expanded product portfolio.

Since its acquisition, Culinary Farms has been a trusted name for premium dried tomatoes, chiles, seasonings, spice blends, smoked ingredients, and value-added culinary solutions. This integration marks the next step in BCFoods' strategic growth, enabling the company to combine Culinary Farms' expertise with its own global reach, extensive product offerings, and robust supply chain.

"The full integration of Culinary Farms into the BCFoods brand will allow us to better serve our customers. By consolidating resources, we can streamline operations, ensuring faster, more reliable service while maintaining the high standards our customers expect," said Mike Bray, President at BCFoods North America. "This is not just a merger of two brands, but a blending of our strengths."

The merger reinforces BCFoods' commitment to sustainability, traceability, and delivering value-added products to the global food industry. Customers across consumer-packaged goods (CPG), food service and other sectors will benefit from the enhanced capabilities and streamlined offerings that the unified brand provides.

While the Culinary Farms name will be retired for now, its legacy lives on in the premium products and dedication to excellence that will form part of the BCFoods portfolio. Customers can expect the same exceptional quality and service, backed by BCFoods' expanded global network and resources.

The integration will be completed in the month of April 2025. For more information about BCFoods and its expanded product offerings, visit bcfoods.com.
